International Clinical Trials Day

Recognising and celebrating the contributions of clinical research professionals, research participants, healthcare professionals and policy makers who advance medical science. The day also serves as a platform to raise public awareness of the importance of clinical trials, promote education and collaboration, and highlight innovation in clinical research globally.

On 20 May, we commemorate the first recorded randomised clinical trial, conducted in 1747 by Scottish physician James Lind.

Recognise the teams and participants who make progress possible.
